

A task dynamics model of speech articulation with state feedback control

Vikram Ramanarayanan^{1,†}, Ben Parrell^{2,†}, John Houde³, Srikantan Nagarajan⁴ and Louis Goldstein⁵

¹Educational Testing Service R&D

²Department of Psychology, UC Berkeley

³Department of Otolaryngology, UCSF

⁴Department of Radiology, UCSF

⁵Department of Linguistics, USC

vramanarayanan@ets.org, parrell@gmail.com

Abstract

We present a task dynamics model of speech articulation that explicitly incorporates a framework for control based on instantaneous and delayed auditory state feedback. We do this by combining two existing well-known theories in the speech production literature – the Task Dynamics model of speech production [?] and the State Feedback Control model of speech motor control [?]. We demonstrate the effectiveness of the model by simulating a simple perturbation study.

Index Terms: task dynamics, articulatory phonology, state feedback control

3. References

1. Introduction

2. Acknowledgements

[†]The first two authors contributed equally to the work.